

Cairo – May 22nd, 2011

Press Release

ACIJLP Organizes a Training Course for Lawyers on "The Role of Lawyers in Activating the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights In Light of the 25th January Revolution's Changes"

The Arab Center for the Independence of the Judiciary and the Legal Profession (ACIJLP) organizes the third training course for lawyers on " The Role of Lawyers in Activating the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights In Light of the 25th January Revolution's Changes" comes within the project of "Judicial and Legislative Obstacles to Economic, Social and Cultural Rights in Egypt" and which will continue throughout 2011 and financed by the European Union.

The training course will start on Tuesday, from May 24th till May 26th, 2011 at 10.00 am... With the participation of 50 lawyers with different positions in the Egyptian Bar Association.

The training course includes many relevant topics such as the new concepts of Human Rights and its development as well as discussing the conventions and the International covenants on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights. In addition to, the national legislations, the international and national mechanisms for protecting the economic, social and cultural rights, the skills of using the International covenants before national courts and the mechanisms and legislations that should be developed in light of the 25th January Revolution's Changes in the Egyptian society.

Many human rights activists and experts in the field of international law and human rights will participate in the training course.